

Deciding What's Important

For some people, deciding what job they want is straight forward. For others, it takes time and thought to decide what they want to do.

Answer these questions about what's important to you to help you discover what kind of job you're looking for.

Are you looking for a job or a career?

A job is working to earn money to support your basic needs and a career is a long-term professional journey.

What are you good at?

We're our best selves at work when we're doing something we're good at and that we enjoy. For example, if you enjoy socialising, a role in customer service could work well for you.

What type of work are you looking for?

Permanent

Temping

Contracting

Internship

Apprenticeship

Graduate Scheme

Volunteering

What kind of environment would you like?

Would you rather work indoors or outdoors? Is it important to you that you can work from home, or would you rather be out the house?

How will you get to work?

Knowing your transport options for getting to work will help to narrow down the roles you can apply for. Perhaps you can cycle to work or get public transport.

What do you want to achieve?

Your main goal might be to pay your bills, or it might be to achieve a life-long dream at work. Either way, it's important to consider which roles will best help you achieve your goals.
